

The lower bathroom reveals large format, ivory porcelain tile with a flush installed cut-glass mirror. A white quartz floating vanity with integrated sink rests above a floating cedar bench. The steam shower features a rain head fixture within its 10-ml. glass enclosure.

Large-format, ivory porcelain tile surfaces the master ensuite's floor and shower features with smooth elegance. The oak, flat slab vanity hosts bronze finger pulls beneath a white quartz countertop and backsplash with a flush, cut-glass mirror and chrome plumbing fixtures.

Rescom, a prestigious construction management firm, is proud of its over 40-year history of custom achievements, and it shows. Challenging the benchmark of ultra-luxe builds, their consistently bold approach to innovation and craftsmanship affords few limitations and near infinite possibilities.

"With their roots in the commercial sector, Rescom applies a culture of effective project management and problem solving to the residential side, which is something quite special," states Residential Vice-President, Sydney Bond. "We have combined decades of experience where we effectively work towards meeting schedules and budgets. It's this commercial ideology that resonates in each build we do—our tried-and-true proven process, with the flexible nature of residential—which is a nice juxtaposition of the two."

Striving for something unique with every home, they have executed their clients' vision through forms and light. "Jagare Ridge has their own stringent guide lines that had to be addressed, so we needed to be resilient and above all, committed to the design," continues Sydney. "You won't see anything else like this in the community with its bold architectural appeal inside and out of the home. We particularly
